Subject: Special Joint Committee on Physician-Assisted Dying

A patient has an accurate sense of their essence as they get close to end of tolerance with pain and isolation and have lost their connections with humankind - Their nature of life being completely centered on their pain - whatever doctors' perceived depth of a patient dementia - or - patient is not conscious. Their previously expressed wishes to end, having been directly to their family and doctor; with for example, a DNR former request. Visit long term care and palliative care and hear those willing people who possibly have already filled out 'a death- request form'.

Assisted death in extreme suffering of excruciating diseases leading to excruciating death-process and upon form request, must, in all of humanity, be accepted. We have evolved to a species within Humane Thought. Find those doctors who know Assisted Death When Requested to be humane and in goodness for the patient; and they will speak for us. Being part of the Medical Profession and saving life's souls to be released into a greater Being - The consenting patients in lost awareness of mindset within 'life with earthly-living', is the determining factor.

We now need to embrace and adopt DWD concepts into our humanities - We are much more than just the species of humans and have long ago embraced the idea of 'The Humanities'. No longer being in the 17th century when humans in deathly-infliction were left on the roadside to die in agony - But instead of that horror, we might now leave dying patients (humans) in rows of beds and in dying an agonizing death.

We prescribe many Poisonous-Drugs that destroy human organs slowly - or - more quickly, while attempting to improve the immediate source of deathly-illness and agony of pain - it should be reasonable that upon request, we allow a better way than 'not poisoning organs of patients to such slow and agonizing death. It is not more righteous to prolong life with poisonous drugs that destroy body parts slowly - or addiction-induce a patient to another disease of disorders of addictions - when patient is forced to merely be cast into surviving a little longer.
