

Conversion Therapy needs to be defined as an attack on a persons convictions or beliefs, not as offering information that could benefit the individual to give them help. We still must be allowed the right to freely express our viewpoints, however forcing them on another, should be against the law. They must still be allowed to seek council and all opinions must be able to be heard. It is not even government's role to dictate outcomes to its citizens, so the way this law, and many laws recently have been aimed at forcing outcomes for individuals is actually unconstitutional and in violation of the law. Ask God for His wisdom and do not get involved in personal directives when it comes to legal matters. No one is above the law. Thank you.
